ATLANTA – Sept. 12, 2018 – Set in the Fading Suns Universe, where the suns themselves are dying, humanity battles to revive its lost greatness - or just take what is left. The five great Royal Houses dominate human space as they battle each other for control of the greatest resource - humanity itself.

In Noble Armada: Lost Worlds, players take on the role of a noble in one of the five Royal houses or the Urth Orthodox Church, vying against rival fleets and houses for control of human space. They battle pirates, barbarians, heretics and others in their quest for supremacy.

Noble Armada is a game of broadsides and boarding actions, as players maneuver their ships to line up their best shots, unleash broadsides of fiery energy and then board their enemies to end the battle with desperate boarding actions. As they travel from planet to planet, making allies and building up their fleets, they also gain the experience they need to make their crews and marines truly formidable.

“We’ve had a great time tweaking the established RTS conventions. Movement is not just point and click, as players have to take into account the unique physics of space” said lead game designer Andrew Greenberg. “In addition, we’ve gone for a pauseable real-time format that allows players to take time strategizing before unleashing a hail of blaster fire.”

Players have the opportunity to choose from a wide variety of missions involving five different houses. They can also design their own battles in the game’s Skirmish mode or using the built-in Mission Editor. There they select what ships they and their enemies command, as well as the victory conditions. The video game version of Noble Armada takes the miniatures game and turns it into a fast-paced strategy game. It utilizes the original miniature game mechanics while taking advantage of the best features of its new digital home.

"The response to the game's Kickstarter was especially encouraging," said Holistic Design President, Chris Wiese. "Many old fans signed on for that effort, and we look forward to giving them another exciting strategy game to keep them playing for hours."
